FALL OPENING!

HATS AND BONNETS, TRIMMED AND FINISHED, OCTOBER 3 and 4 (No carols)

HERNDON ITEMS.

Mr. G. W. Bell celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday anniversary by inviting the following friends to a 6 o'clock tea on Friday last: Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Sweetser, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Bready, Mrs. McNeal, Mr. Frank McNeal, Miss Anna Bready, Mrs. M. M. Mays, Mr. Albert Mays and Mrs. Charles Johnson.

Frida evening the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor held a musicale at the house of Mr. Levi J. Groh on Maine street.

Mrs. Laura Gaenther, of Ohio, who was visiting her mother, Mrs. Bickler, was taken with typhoid fever, and after a short illness died. The funeral took place Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

Rev. H. J. Clifton, who has accepted the call to St. Timothy's, has been visiting and will preach his first sermon next Sunday.

Mr. Alvin Oliver is building a dwelling house on Station street which is nearly ready for occupancy.

Monday night Dr. B. B. Detwiler's horse ran away with a buggy attached, and was found the next morning on the old home road, some distance from town, with everything intact.

The public schools opened on Monday.

Oh, What a Difference!

He (gently)—Are you not afraid some one may marry you for your money?

She (sweetly)—Dear, no! Such an idea never entered my head.

He (tenderly)—Ah! in your sweet innocence you do not know how coldly, cruelly mercenary some men are.

She (quietly)—Perhaps not.

He (with surprised emotion)—I would not for the world have such a terrible fate happen to you. The man who wins you should love you for yourself alone.

She—He'll have to. It's my cousin Jennie who has the money, not I. You've made some mistake. I haven't a penny.

He—Er—very pleasant weather we're having.—Boston Globe.

Dinners for Brides-to-Be

ANTE-NUPTIAL FESTIVITIES FOR EARLY AUTUMN.

Roses, Pansies, Cupid's Bows and Love Knots Are in Order.

With the coming of autumn and the passing away of summer days there comes also a regular annual influx of brides, and a little in advance of them come dinners and luncheons by the score. Engagements once made and announced, these functions are as certain to follow as the night must the day. Therefore the months preceding November, and, indeed, the early days of that month itself, may well be said to be given over to Cupid's honor. Some few of our last season's weddings were entirely sumptuous, and for a time there was danger that the infection might spread, and that charming simplicity might disappear from the land. But good sense and good breeding have triumphed, as they are apt to do, and it still remains true that in the eyes of the really select over-ornate display is in poor taste, if not actually vulgar, and the pre-nuptial entertainments already given, as well as those in the near future, will be remembered for their comparative simplicity before all else.

The engagement dinner has become quite an established function. Upon the size of the young couple's circle the number given must depend, as an essential matter of course; but, whether there are only the two which represent the families most concerned, or a dozen tendered by interested friends, the details and arrangements are much alike. Love's knots, Cupid's bows and similar emblems are in great demand. Hearts and arrows take precedence of all else. Two which were given last week were as nearly perfect as such things can be and gave unbounded satisfaction to the guests of honor.

The hostess of the former was the bride-elect's elder sister. The guests included the future bride's maids and the ushers, the best man and all those young people who will make up the bridal party, besides a few additional sympathizers and the elders of each family group. The hostess has not herself been long a wife, and the memory of her own engagement was still fresh enough to make her eager in her plans and delightfully earnest in her wish to make a success.

The flowers chosen for the table were roses and forget-me-nots. In the center was a heart-shaped mound entirely composed of la France buds edged with a fringe of the dainty blue blossoms. At each corner was placed a bow with its arrow ready to fly, and beside it stood the menu card in the form of two hearts joined in a daisy which pierced and held them. The conception of each was peculiarly happy, and no doubt a sufficient number of the arrows lodged safely to satisfy even the romantic young matron's ambition. Certainly they made most effective decoration. Each bow was wound with the lovely pink buds. Each string was in reality a bit of silver wire which easily kept its place, and each arrow was a genuine dart, made of silver, to be sure, but set ready to do execution the instant the string should be pulled. The cards which stood beside them were already pierced, and were supposed to be emblematic of the future bride and groom. They were extremely simple, cut from card-board and painted with the forget-me-nots, which, when cut, made a dainty edge. On each one of the hearts the menu was written out with care, and in every possible way the suggestion of true love was made to enter into the minds of the guests.

The food was a special course. They were shod in hearts and served to gether with biscuits in boxes, the lids of which were covered with crepe paper and painted in forget-me-nots. Coffee was served in the drawing room in tiny heart-shaped cups.

There were no souvenirs. The girls carried off their bows of roses, to be sure, but they were of too little intrinsic worth to be dubbed souvenirs. Their forte lay in deco-ating the table, and that they did exceedingly well.

By a happy agreement made between hostess and guests all the costumes worn were of that tender pink shown in the la France rose. Luckily, all the women were young or possessed such fresh, well-cared-for complexions that the color did not seem to be a sacrifice of the individual to the fact which one so often sees. Pink has been the color par excellence the reason through, but in this case it was supposed to be peculiarly appropriate and emblematic of the rosy future promised the bride and groom to be. As a safe rule the color is to be rejected after the sixteenth birthday, but in this instance the guests stood the test remarkably well. Assuredly, the picture as a whole was a lovely one and the ideal it embodied poetic in the extreme.

The second dinner differed somewhat in detail, but in detail only. Given the happy couple as a nucleus, so to speak, all else followed in their train and only in small things can one hope to be original at a function of the sort. Even as the marriage ceremony is the same for all brides, so the engagement dinner savors of monotony, and is only rescued by the fact that it is new to each in her turn. This special one was declared a complete success, however. The table was laid with a cloth of pure white satin damask. Round its edge was arranged real gold-colored satin ribbon in a series of lovers' knots that encircled the space for each cover. The flowers chosen were roses, the favorites of the young bride to be. Before each guest was a big bunch of the purple beauties and beside it a souvenir bonbonniere painted by the hostess herself. Of these the foundation for each was a box made of water-color paper with a band of the blossoms painted, then cut on the edge. Into the box was fitted a bag of silk and on the box proper, below the flowers, in simple outlined letters of gold, was that delightful bit from "Midsummer Night's Dream":

"A little western flower,
Before milk-white, now purple with Love's wound,
And maidens call it love in idleness."

On this occasion there was no uniformity of dress, but the whole affair was rendered delightful and harmonious. Tiny lamps set in silver candelabra and surrounded by masses of pansies, lighted the table or at least spread their glow over the whole, through the medium of shades of yellow silk edged with a fall of the gold fringe. The real illumination, however, came from big lamps set in corners and made apparent by their soft warm rays rather than because of any remarkable decorative effect. Each was of ample size and supplied with a burner that glowed light, and each was shaded with a delicate yellow silk of that tone which means a warm radiance rather than a pronounced colored light. Under their influence the diners and the hostess looked the picture of contentment and the satisfaction of seeing her guests make up a picture perfect in its way.

WOMEN IN OFFICE.

Federation of Clubs Agrees They Are Discriminated Against.

The Federation of Women's Clubs met last night at 8 o'clock in the parlors of the Elliott House with the president, Dr. Ella S. Marble, in the chair. In attendance were present: Ten clubs in the federation and a large number of visitors were also in attendance.

After the regular routine business was disposed of the meeting discussed the status of women in office. The difficulties with which women meet through the Civil Service Commission were detailed at great length and especially in trying for positions where either sex is eligible.

Every one agreed that women were discriminated against in favor of men. The next meeting will not be held until the first Wednesday in January.

Knives, Forks and Spoons.

Table linen, cloths and napkins did not make their presence felt on the continent or in England until the time of Joan of Arc. Charles VII. was the first monarch that used them, and the first set that ever came into play were made at Rheims.

Like everything else, table utensils—the fittings for the table in glass, china, linen and metal—have been an outgrowth of centuries. Almost every article has its own particular age of invention, and few of the dainty devices now made use of existed in their present shape even a hundred or so years ago.

Salt itself was held in high favor by the ancients. In the pages of Homer it is spoken of as "divine," and at the banquets of the Romans and Greeks it held a place of honor. Salt cellars were heirlooms in those days, and they were often made of silver and gold, very beautifully fashioned and very exquisite in design.

The drinking cups stood upon the tables and the huffets of even the middle classes during medieval times in the place of glasses. The princes and nobles used vessels of gold or silver adorned with precious stones. Glassware was exceedingly rare until the fifteenth century, when the products of Venice began to be spread abroad.

It is interesting to note that the custom of serving wine in different glasses belongs only to this country. One hundred years ago each guest at a dinner had but one glass, and when each new wine came upon the table he dipped his glass into a small earthenware porringer, filled with fresh water, that stood near him, raising it thoroughly for the liquid that was to come.

An epileptic young woman, whose case is reported in the Lancet, seems to have broken the record for fits. She had 3,205 distinct fits in twenty-one days, an average of 152 a day, and in one day had 320 of them. She was cured with chloral hydrate and bromide of potassium.

WED IN THE HARVEST MOON

October Marriages Start in With a Rush.

Notes and Personals of People You Know—City Homes Rapidly Filling With Returning Families.

It was a brilliant assemblage that witnessed the marriage of Mr. Henry Harding Burroughs, of Scranton, Pa., to Miss Mary Hannah Grover, daughter of Mr. Jerome Diver, at Calvary Baptist Church last evening.

The altar was banked with palms and cut roses, behind which a stringed orchestra discoursed sweet music during the arrival of the guests.

Shortly before the arrival of the bridal party the young ladies composing the Sunday school class of the bride entered in full evening dress, accompanied by the ushers, and were seated in the front row of the auditorium.

A few minutes before 8 o'clock the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, and was preceded down the right aisle by the ushers, Mr. William Horton and Mr. E. G. Mason, of New York; Dr. Stoutenburgh, Dr. Buckingham, Dr. Swartwout, and Dr. Lynch, followed by the maid of honor, Miss Hattie Diver, sister of the bride, attired in white organdie over silk and carrying La France roses.

The bride wore a handsome going-away gown of brown English mode, with shoulder straps of brown velvet and puffs of gold-colored satin down the front of the bodice.

She wore a brown hat trimmed with lace and Mercury wings, tan gloves, and carried a bouquet of bride's roses.

The bride was met at the altar by the groom who was attended by Mr. Charles O'Neill, of Washington, as best man.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Green, and the impressive ring service was used.

The party left the church by the left aisle and departed immediately for Scranton, Pa., their future home.

An enjoyable concert and dance was given last night at St. John's Parish Hall for the benefit of St. Michael and All Angels' Church. Well-known local talent assisted the members of the choir, and the entertainment was very successful.

Among those who participated were Mrs. Daisy Fox, Miss Josephine Davis, Mrs. Lucy Steele, Miss Kitchin, Miss Elliott, Mrs. Fox, and Messrs. Gail, Kaner, Keeling, Lawrence, Moore, Compton, Bishop and Read.

The marriage of Miss Charlie B. King, daughter of Mr. Charles King, one of the leading merchants of Alexandria, to Mr. Charles W. Hulsh, a well-known young business man, took place in Grace Episcopal Church, Alexandria, last night, at 7:30 o'clock. Long before the hour fixed for the ceremony the church was filled with the friends of the young couple. Promptly on the hour, the bridal party came up to the chancel, which had been handsomely decorated with palms and potted plants for the occasion, and stood before the Rev. Clarence Ernest Ball, who tied the nuptial knot.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents on St. Asaph street, and later Mr. and Mrs. Hulsh left on a tour of two weeks in the North.

Miss Manie Talbot, daughter of Mr. Charles Talbot, and Mr. Carleton A. Padgett were married in the parsonage of St. Mary's Catholic Church, Alexandria, yesterday evening, in the presence of a large number of their friends. After the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Father J. J. Bowler, pastor of St. Mary's, Mr. and Mrs. Padgett left on a wedding trip to New York.

One of the most brilliant social events of the season was the reception given by Dr. J. C. Martin and wife at their home, No. 405 G street northeast, last evening. The house was beautifully decorated with palms and cut flowers. Dancing was indulged in until 11:30, when refreshments were served. Among those present were Miss Anderson, Mrs. Dutton, Mr. Church, Miss Nash, Miss Foremyer, the Misses Heinrichs, the Misses Sellers, Miss Martin, Miss Adeline, Messrs. Anderson, W. Fletcher, E. Fletcher, J. Ford, G. Smith, Dr. Maddox, G. Bonner, Nicholas V. Nash, A. Jones, Nolte, May, B. Turner, M. Inscow, and Prof. Storor.

Dr. and Mrs. Wm. R. Frisbie, of No. 821 Vermont avenue, have recently returned from a month's sojourn at Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

St. Mary's Catholic Church, Alexandria, was packed to the doors last night by those who had assembled to witness the marriage of Miss May B. Shuman, daughter of Mr. Louis Shuman, to Mr. Claude M. Lennon, a popular young drug clerk of the city.

The ceremony took place at 6:30 o'clock, and promptly on the hour the bridal party came up the center aisle of the church and were met at the altar rail by Rev. Fathers J. J. Kenefick and J. J. Bowler.

The bride was attired in a gown of white pique de loi and chiffon, with a tulle veil, and carried bride roses.

Miss Martha Sever, of Washington, who was maid of honor, wore a white silk gown and carried La France roses. The bridesmaids were Misses Dorothy Lennon, Julia Lindsey, May Greenwell, and May Harlow, and they were attired in gowns of pink silk and carried La France roses.

Mr. Louis Shuman, Jr., the brother of the bride, was the best man, and the ushers were Messrs. Ernest B. Mills and Wm. H. Quinn, of Alexandria; C. C. Wright, of Washington, and M. G. Lennon, of Norfolk.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride from 7 until 10 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Lennon left for a trip to Philadelphia, New York, and Boston. They will make Alexandria their home.

Judge Weldon, of the Court of Claims, and Mrs. Weldon, who have been spending the summer at Bloomington, Ill., are expected at the Hamilton, where they have taken apartments, the latter part of October.

The marriage of Mr. Charles E. Hoover to Miss Viola K. Sanderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Sanderson, of 1118 K street southeast, took place at Trinity M. E. Church last evening at 8 o'clock.

The bride, who carried the church promptly at the hour named, to the strains of the wedding chorus from Lohengrin, preceded by the following ushers: Mr. John Acton, Mr. George Hummer, Mr. Howard Hoover and Mr. U. S. G. Hoover. Mr. J. Noble Hoover as groom's attendant, with the maid of honor, Miss Hattie Hoover, came next, followed by the bride and groom together.

The bride was attired in an elegant gown of white satin en train, and wore a veil caught with orange blossoms and smilax. White muslin de sole and orange blossoms with white lace, ornamented the bodice, and she carried a bouquet of bride's roses tied with white ribbons.

Miss Hattie Hoover, as maid of honor, was prettily dressed in ivory satin, trimmed with lace and garlands of pink rose buds, and carried a bouquet of La France roses.

Immediately after the ceremony, a reception was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Hoover by the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John K. Hoover, at 1613 Marion street northwest, the future home of the young couple. Two hundred guests were in attendance to offer congratulations.

The receiving party consisted of Mr. and Mrs. John K. Hoover, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Sanderson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Hoover, Miss Hattie Hoover and Mr. J. Noble Hoover.

Mrs. John K. Hoover was attired in an elegant gown of black satin brocade with waist of yellow satin brocade, trimmed with jet and lace.

Mrs. L. W. Sanderson wore black satin duchesse, trimmed with cut jet and point lace.

Many beautiful presents were displayed in the library, notably a mahogany cabinet of hand-painted china, a gift from the bride's parents; china dinner service from Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Hummer, and a tea service from Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Hoover.

The groom's present to the bride was a chest of silver.
